Last year, he began to use the equipment to shoot a close-up of the exhibits, received wide acclaim, this year is no exception. Q: participated in several Nahbs A: since 2007 or 2008 I began to pay attention to Nahbs, so it has been a long time, every year to come. What aspects of Nahbs Q: do you want to pass on to people? A: I wanted to show people is almost my site has been passed to the people riding style, whether it is road or mountain bike or car travel, is that I think the audience will expect the things. I try to avoid time cars, but I like to take the car, but this year to die and fly culture saturated to decline and Nahbs suppression, so probably I usually take the type of bike. Q: what aspects of the show are you like? Nahbs A: allows me to see all the frame craftsmen, but also allows me to meet a lot of friends, is to see new friends. The role of the Q: hand bicycle frame in the bicycle industry A: the biggest difference is that it is a person in the garage inside out, rather than the factory or large equipment. I don't think there's any conflict with the mass production bike. Because I think is not all people will be able to buy the custom bike, for me, I just pay attention to ride a bike, but I think to a frame builders communication and get a car in full compliance with their own style of car is very happy thing, which is the production of bicycle can not meet the place. Q: to talk about the transformation of your site A: two years ago, is not probably Prolly turned into a Radavist. Just because I want to hire more people, to absorb more voices and ideas, but also when they want to make some changes in the node. Q: specific how to do? A: transformation of this site, is basically a number of friends to help operators look at the brand, for a web site, the content of the transfer, the concept is very simple, but also spent a lot of time. Southern California local famous niche bike culture symbol is Q:Dream team and Tracko, behind Sean Talkington and Kyle Kelly is John career promoter. Kyle A: is the biggest help to me. He often helps me.
